Welcome to ENL 2012, Approaches to Lit!

This course provides a starting point for working with theoretical texts, being aware of conversations in literary criticism, and participating in scholarly conversations about the texts you read. In this course, you will learn strategies and skills for critical and original thinking about a variety of texts, communicating through writing and speaking, and assessing the value of diverse critical approaches to literature and other texts. As you develop these abilities, they will serve you throughout college and your lifetime.

Course Description

English 2012 is an introduction to literary analysis that begins to prepare you for the demands of critically writing about and reading literature in the university but also helps you to think about writing beyond the classroom and in a variety of contexts.

Reading and writing are both acts of inquiry and communication. With that in mind, this course offers you:

- opportunities to identify, develop, and express concepts;
- to engage in conversations with the ideas of others;
- to critique and construct arguments through original writing projects about the texts we read.

Writing is also a process, and since this course fulfills part of your composition requirements, we will emphasize drafting, revising, and editing as critical practices in developing thoughtful

To accomplish these goals, this course places attention on understanding different approaches to literary analysis, applying literary analysis methods to diverse media and cultural contexts, and developing argumentative writing skills.

Together, we will consider questions including:

- Is there only one way to read a text?
- What are the tools, lenses, or methods that might be useful for producing original insights into and debatable claims about a text?
- Why might we want to interpret literature at all?
- What interpretive tools or methods are more or less effective for thinking through the projects of individual texts?
- What is required for careful or “close” reading, and are their other methods, such as “distant” reading which also have value for our interpretive practices?
- How do you use different genres or discourse conventions to make your writing work?
- How can you contribute to critical conversations about texts as cultural objects?

Finally, English 2012 emphasizes critical thinking, which rests on a process of careful and engaged reading of texts in a variety of forms and the use of writing as conversation and discussion to explore, express, and argue about ideas as well as their place in the larger world.

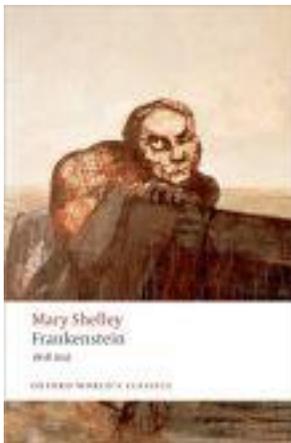

What’s the theme of this course? SCALES OF JUDGMENT

Scholars of literature have held a longstanding debate about whether or not there is a right way to read literature. Approaches to literature have changed over the past century, from New Criticism, which insisted on reading only what was in the text and nothing beyond, to the digital humanities, which attempts to use algorithmic methods to visualize massive quantities of text. In this class, we will familiarize ourselves with these various methods of reading, from the smallest word to the biggest corpus of literature, for scales of judgment on which to analyze text. Understanding that there are different scales (depths or heights), from words to phrases to sentences to chapters to full libraries, within which can read a text forces us to make choices about which scale will be most appropriate and useful for gleaning literature’s project.

Nineteenth-century British literature (Romantic and Victorian) lends itself well to the practice of these methods. Consequently, we will think with nineteenth-century writers about literary form, reading depth, part-whole relationships, the individual and society, and the ligatures between reading practices and different types of judgment. We will also read recent theorists of literature, such as Heather Love, Franco Moretti, and Eric Hayot, who argue for reading practices at various scales, from form to canons of literature to the entire world. In practicing these critical skills, we will read nineteenth-century literature that was invested in thinking about judgment through law suits, aesthetics, or social conventions. Together, we will ask such questions as: which reading methods are more or less appropriate for literature? what does these methods and measures help us accomplish as readers? and how do they assist us in gaining new perspectives on what literature is and can do? We will interrogate not only how these authors attempted to think about judgment through the forms of their texts but whether those forms encourage us to emphasize one critical approach over another.

What texts should you buy?

BE AWARE: If possible, please purchase these exact editions of the texts. New and used copies are available for less than $30 total for this course. Because we will be working with texts from the nineteenth century, the text can vary from edition to edition, depending on the editor and which manuscript versions were chosen. In other words, if you do not purchase or have scanned versions of these editions, your page numbers will not match and, in fact, the text itself might be different from what we are reading in class.

Frankenstein, or the Modern Prometheus (the 1818 edition)

What texts will be provided to you on Canvas?

All other texts will be provided to you on Canvas as scanned Adobe (.pdf) files. On the course calendar, these texts are indicated in parenthesis, like so (C).

How will we evaluate your progress in this class?

BE AWARE: This course is reading and writing intensive. This term, you will write on a weekly basis, either discussion posts, short responses, or longer essay assignments. One of the major goals for this course is to strengthen your writing skills. Writing often is the way to do that. If you are used to waiting until the night before a paper is due to write your draft, that method will not lead to success in this course. I emphasize and teach that writing is process. The best way to grow and develop as a writer, and to turn in successful work, is to work on your projects a little bit each day.

By the end of the semester, you will be able to:

CRITICAL OUTCOMES:

Recognize different critical and theoretical approaches to literary analysis

- define the distinction between theoretical and critical conversations
- Read texts with multiple critical approaches
- recognize that there are many valid interpretations of a texts
- assess the effectiveness of some critical methods over others
- appraise critical arguments and identify their components
- formulate new interventions into critical conversations

INTERPRETIVE OUTCOMES:

Evaluate texts in diverse media and cultural contexts using those approaches

- comprehending and analyzing texts
- recognizing genre expectations
- practice textual analysis on a variety of texts
- become a better critical reader able to connect ideas and texts, ask questions, and identify assumptions and values
- extrapolate from theoretical and critical conversations to offer original interpretive insights
- Develop applicability of approaches to personal experience/cultural contexts
- Reflect on applicability of approaches to texts, courses, and own lives

WRITING OUTCOMES:

Write interpretative arguments of texts using those approaches

- selecting, narrowing, and focusing topics
- generating and organizing ideas
- learning how to use evidence effectively
- learning the conventions of academic writing
- find, evaluate, read, and incorporate (summarize, attribute, paraphrase) secondary sources
- citing sources, avoiding plagiarism
- revising and editing written projects for ideas, organization, logic, as well as lower order concerns, such as grammar
- develop basic research skills specific to the study of literature (e.g. library databases, citation and documentation conventions, evaluation and use of secondary sources)

PROFESSIONALISM AND PARTICIPATION POLICIES

How will you succeed in this course?

- 1) Because this course is reading and writing intensive, the best route to success is to develop the habit of reading and writing a little bit each day. Reading ahead is always wise and strongly recommended. Taking notes as you read is also recommended. Our duty with what we read is to interpret, objectively, the most meaningful and valuable points in the text, and to then compare and evaluate differing interpretations to formulate an analytical payoff for the text.
- 2) Participation, which includes discussion posts and Digital Practicum) is 25% of your total grade, which is sufficient to either pull your grade up or pull your grade down depending on your active participation. Be prepared to offer evidence from your reading, to think with others by offering substantive ideas in discussion, and to develop your writing.
- 3) Participation is key to your learning. Everyone contributes to the success of this course. Speaking up during class is easier for some than others. I can help out if you are unsure how to enter the conversation—talk to me after class or end me an email. If you have any concerns about participation in this course, please speak to me about options.
- 4) Come to class prepared to think critically and carefully about difficult problems. Argument is not always about fighting over what you “know” is right. Rather, argument is often about helping others explain an important point, entering a conversation, or helping others help us to understand this point. Argumentation is a way to illuminate important ideas that we have in common, to challenge received wisdom, and to rethink a world view.

How to think about preparing:

- the text is your evidence to back up your argument and claims
- learn to take notes to capture your thinking as you read
- if you don't want to write in your text, write on post-it notes, flags, or in a separate notebook.
- prepare for discussions by identifying specific examples from the reading
- identifying this textual evidence will help you contribute to discussion, and also to help others think rigorously and responsibly through textual problems
- Always include textual evidence in your discussion posts.
- think of our conversations as an exercise in critical analysis, reasoning, and persuasion

Useful techniques to enhance your class participation skills:

- prepare at least one comment or question about the week's reading for each discussion session and bring it with you to class
- write your questions down and come prepared to raise your ideas in discussion
- on the discussion boards, address your comments to the whole class, not just to me
- use your classmates preferred names and pronouns
- identify suggestions for things you would like to discuss (e.g., confusing passages, key terms)
- feel free to ask questions if anything is unclear
- turn work in on time

ENVIRONMENT OF MUTUAL RESPECT:

I emphasize and require an environment of mutual respect in our classroom.

To help build an environment of mutual respect in the classroom:

- Come to class with a positive attitude, respect for your class-mates and our discussions, a sincere desire to understand, and a willingness to work towards common goals.
- While we might address controversial, and occasionally even uncomfortable, subject matter, it is crucial that we speak to one another respectfully and endeavor to listen attentively to the ideas of others.
- Listening attentively is an active form of learning, not passive reception.

Frequently Asked Questions

What if I can't turn work in on time?

You will do a lot of writing in this course. All work must be turned in on the date specified. No late work is accepted unless you have spoken with me prior to the deadline (in the case of the three big assignments). A half-grade deduction for each day late after the due date will be applied. If you have an emergency, I understand that. Emergencies happen. Please communicate with me as soon as possible so that we can plan together how you might complete your assignment. I am always open to and generous with allowing extensions IF you contact me in advance of the deadline. Once the deadline passes, then rules for late work will be applied. You must turn in all work for this course by the end of the term to pass the class.

What kind of assignments should I expect to do?

There will be short writing assignments in addition to reading and essay assignments. For these and the longer essays, you will be informed of the expectations and instructions for the assignment well in advance of the due date. We will also work together to peer review each assignment in advance of the due date. We will conduct peer review in the online environment. Peer review not only helps you to think about writing as a process (not something you do the night before!), but it will also teach you to provide constructive criticism to colleagues, a valuable skill both in college and in your future professions. You are always welcome to ask me questions about assignments in class, by email, or in office hours. I'd rather have you ask a question than be confused or spend time working on the wrong assignment.

How will I find out about assignments and changes to the syllabus?

Most assignments and instructions will be delivered via email since this is an online course. Reading my emails thoroughly and being aware of all deadlines is your responsibility. Weekly assignments count toward your participation grade. If you have questions about the class, I always recommend checking your syllabus and assignment first or asking a classmate! The answers to your questions can frequently be found in this way. If you still need to email me with a question, however, feel free to do so. I'm happy to help!

RESOURCES

What is academic misconduct? How do I avoid it?

Florida International University is a community dedicated to generating and imparting knowledge through excellent teaching and research, the rigorous and respectful exchange of ideas and community service. All students should respect the right of others to have an equitable opportunity to learn and honestly to demonstrate the quality of their learning. Therefore, all students are expected to adhere to a standard of academic conduct, which demonstrates respect for themselves, their fellow students, and the educational mission of the University. All students are deemed by the University to understand that if they are found responsible for academic misconduct, they will be subject to the Academic Misconduct procedures and sanctions, as outlined in the Student Handbook.

Academic Misconduct includes: Cheating – The unauthorized use of books, notes, aids, electronic sources; or assistance from another person with respect to examinations, course assignments, field service reports, class recitations; or the unauthorized possession of examination papers or course materials, whether originally authorized or not. Plagiarism – The use and appropriation of another's work without any indication of the source and the representation of such work as the student's own. Any student who fails to give credit for ideas, expressions or materials taken from another source, including internet sources, is responsible for plagiarism.

In order to avoid plagiarism, please follow these procedures in all your assignments:

- If you reproduce statements verbatim, place them in quotation marks and explicitly state the author's name and cite your source. In the case of a block quotation, forego quotation marks (per MLA guidelines) but make sure to indent the quotation and clearly cite your source.
- If you reproduce or rephrase the general idea (not verbatim), forego quotation marks but still explicitly state the author's name and cite your source.
